California Signature Requirements for Lincoln MoneyGuard®

Acceptance of wet signatures only

Lincoln's MoneyGuard® team would like to remind our partners of the regulations for obtaining signatures for cases in California (CA). CA civil regulations prevent the electronic signing and transmission of certain forms; therefore, Lincoln will not accept electronic signatures on any MoneyGuard form, including but not limited to, the Part I and Long-Term Care (LTC) Replacement forms. If an electronic signature is received on any form, the form will be marked "not-in-good-order" and the producer will be instructed to submit wet-signed forms.

The following text will be added to the MoneyGuard Application Checklist in California to serve as an additional reminder*:

IMPORTANT: No electronic signatures can be applied to these MoneyGuard forms per CA state requirements. These will need to be wet signed prior to submission.

This updated checklist will be made available on some platforms at a later date due to system release schedules. Until then, the current checklist may be used with the continued expectation that forms will be wet-signed.*

Understanding the eSignature Agreement Protocol

Lincoln's procedure for accepting electronic signatures

Reprinted from the Oct. 10, 2022 Lincoln Life Leader

Lincoln and many of our valued partners have embraced using electronic signatures to distribute and sign documents in a simple and efficient way. To protect our clients from potential fraud, Lincoln has created an eSignature Agreement Protocol. This common industry practice requires that financial professionals use Lincoln's DocuSign eSignature process or enter an electronic document agreement with Lincoln through their firm if they prefer to use their own software.

What You Need to Know

Lincoln took a risk-based approach while drafting the eSignature Agreement and in determining what electronic signature platforms Lincoln would accept. Doing so allows Lincoln to enact fraud protections for our company, our partner firms/producers and the end consumer. When Lincoln obtains an eSignature using its own procedures, Lincoln verifies the signing party with a PIN and maintains a copy of the electronic signing process. That process includes the customer's consent to give an eSignature, which has been carefully drafted to comply with all state and federal requirements. If there is ever a question about whether that signature is valid or was properly obtained, Lincoln has the information necessary to validate the signature.

When Lincoln receives an eSignature that was obtained using a third party's procedures, Lincoln is unable to verify the validity of an eSignature or that the process used was compliant with applicable laws and regulations. This puts Lincoln at risk of having to reverse any action taken if there is a dispute regarding the validity of the eSignature. Therefore, the eSignature Agreement was developed to allow Lincoln to accept eSignatures from significant distribution partners who are willing to accept responsibility for the eSignatures they provide to Lincoln.

To be eligible to enter into an eSignature Agreement with Lincoln, firms must have a marketing and/or selling agreement in place. Individual financial professionals may not enter into an eSignature Agreement. If you have any questions about Lincoln's DocuSign eSignature process or about entering into an eSignature Agreement, please reach out to your dedicated Lincoln Underwriting and New Business Team.
